GOVERNOR

J. P. Coleman

Mississippi voters elected Atty. Gen. J. P. Coleman their new governor, the job a poor farm boy set as his goal more than 20 years ago.

Unofficial returns from 1798 of 1850 precincts in Tuesday's Democratic runoff primary showed: Coleman 223,904; Johnson 177,735. Coleman leads by 46,169.

The farm boy who worked his way through college and law school defeated Atty. Paul B. Johnson, son of a former governor making his third bid for the post.

It was Coleman's first statewide campaign. He worked up the judicial ladder as district attorney, circuit judge, Supreme Court Justice and Attorney General before making the try. He was elected Attorney General without opposition.

The 41-year-old winner, a husky 6 feet 5, will be Mississippi's youngest governor since 1832.

Coleman will be the Democratic nominee for governor in the November election. In Democratic Mississippi, that means election. Republicans seldom venture into a state race and none has said he will run against Coleman.

Coleman promised to keep Negroes out of white schools, regulate public utilities and wipe out gambling on the Gulf Coast.

Coleman grabbed the lead with the first scattered reports. He never lost it. Through the night he built up a widening margin.

Coleman won by keeping his first primary strength in north Mississippi and sweeping the vital Delta, which gave former governor Fielding Wright an overwhelming vote in the first primary.

Johnson's south Mississippi strength, built up over three earlier statewide races, failed to show up as Johnson's backers expected. Coleman captured 10 of the counties in Johnson's home area and led in a few others where returns were incomplete.

Johnson's winning margin in several other south Mississippi counties was thin. His backers expected him to win with top-heavy votes in his home area plus good showings in other sections.

Coleman won or led in 62 counties. Johnson won or led in 19. One county did not report.

Coleman carried virtually all of north Mississippi. He shut out Johnson in the Delta.

Coleman won Hinds County, the heaviest voting county in the state. Johnson grabbed a top-heavy lead in Harrison County, which cast the second highest total.

Johnson carried Hancock County 3,368 to 2,154.

MRS. CORA GAUDET DIES AUGUST 20

Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock from Christ Episcopal Church for Mrs. Cora Lucinda Gaudet, wife of Charles A. Gaudet, who died Saturday, Aug. 20 at 4:50 p.m.

Mrs. Gaudet was the mother of William G. Gaudet and the late Laura Miriam Gaudet; also survived by two grandchildren, Gerald and Noelle Gaudet.

Funeral services were held from the Laudumey Funeral Home in New Orleans. The remains were brought to Bay St. Louis. Interment was in the Coward Cemetery.

Phillips, Hubbard, Mazarakis and Ladner Win

Sylvan J. Ladner Jr., Bay St. Louis Commissioner of Finance, led Gerald V. Price by 111 votes in a close race for Hancock County Sheriff according to unofficial returns from the county's 25 precincts in Tuesday's second primary election.

Ladner polled 2,596 votes to ex-Constable Price's 2,485.

Ladner overcame Price's first primary advantage of 259, when Price had 1,171 and Ladner had 878, to top the original 14-man field.

Clerk of Courts A. C. (Mitch) Mitchell was elected to his third straight term, edging former Bay St. Louis Mayor Warren Carver 3,090 to 2,478, a difference of 612 votes in the other countywide race.

Ladner will succeed John A. Egluff, who was defeated by incumbent R. G. (Manny) Hubbard Jr. in the supervisors' contest in Beat 5.

The vote: Hubbard 1,672; Egluff 1,305. A resident of Waveland, Hubbard is currently serving his second term on the board.

Supervisor Jack Lott of Kiln was re-elected to a third straight term in Beat 4, shading Lander Necaise, also of Kiln, 570 to 517. Thus, the entire Hancock County board returned intact. Charles A. Russ Jr. of Perlington and Johnson Shaw of Sellers were re-nominated for the Beat 1 and Beat 3 offices, respectively. Beat 2's Frank Kellar was unopposed.

State Representative Walter J. Phillips of Bay St. Louis will enter his second term in a new after polling 2,531 votes to 2,495 for Clarence M. Ladner, Dedeaux school administrator.

L. C. Ladner, superintendent of Kiln School apparently is the new state

BAY HIGH TIGERS
START PRE-SEASON GRIDIRON PRACTICE
Beginning his second year at Bay St. Louis High School, Head Coach Lance Lumpkin has the nucleus of a consistent ball club, but the Tigers are confronted with a tough ten-game slate-six in the Class A DeSoto circuit.
Workouts during the first week were concluded Friday in the Tiger camp with approximately 30 candidates, including 10 lettermen. Coach Lumpkin is expecting more boys to receive gear before school days begin.
Don Caldwell of Hickory, Miss. and James (Brick) Mason are the assistant coaches. Caldwell was an aide last year and also tutored basketball. Mason, who played for Pearl River Junior College and Mississippi Southern College, joined the staff Friday.
Main tiger losses among the nine departing lettermen were two ends, a quarterback and a center. Gone are Don Cole, a cool Split T field general; steady terminals Kent Sellier and Clayton Adam; and pivotman Charles Moran.
Tommy Holden, a converted 175-pound halfback, is the chief candidate to succeed Cole; but sophomores Wayne Alliston and Grady Perkins, both 135, are learning fast.
Holden is a capable blocker, but must master passes if the Tigers are to replace Cole's aerial adeptness. Halfback lettermen are Harold Bordages, 145-pound junior, and Henry Monti, 150-pound junior.
The most experienced player on the roster is Hugo (Go-Go) Favre, a fullback performer who will run from left half this season. The 185-pound senior packs punch in hitting the line and his defense is adequate.
The Tiger's record last year was 5-5.

THIS WEEK
Farm Bureau
Experiments in fertilization and cropping for 125 years were witnessed last Friday in Harpenden Harts, England, by Boswell Stevens, president of the Mississippi Farm Bureau Federation.
Stevens, who is on a six weeks tour of Europe while attending two overseas agricultural conferences, visited the Rothamsted experiment station 25 miles from London where the agricultural experiments are called the oldest continuous experiments in the world.
As guests of the station director, Stevens, together with Mrs. Stevens, took tea in the director's home which was built in 1600—before the first colony was planned in America. Stevens writes that five experimental plots of ground at the station have grown such things as barley, Irish potatoes and grass continuously for 111 years with no fertilizer added.
The barley plots, he states, are producing some 900 pounds per acre. Every five years one of the plots is fallowed and the next year its yield is increased by approximately 100 pounds.
"Actually, after this hundred years working with all of the commonly known combinations of fertilizers, the experiments prove conclusively that you can become completely out of balance with nitrogen, phosphate or potash," Stevens said.
Stevens expressed amazement over the extent of mechanization in England despite the small size of the farms and apparent ample labor supply, and the fact that all fuel products in England have to be imported. He explained that much experimental work is being carried on seeking a cheap protein feed for livestock. Physical conditioning of the soil and insect control too are important research projects.
While touring part of the English countryside Stevens reported seeing "very fine herds" of all breeds of cattle grown in Mississippi with possibly more Holsteins for dairymaking and Shorthorns for meat. "Sheep were in abundance with all of our common breeds and the poultry business appeared to be prospering inasmuch as most farms had large flocks."
People who are always making final statements oversimplify life and overestimate their mental talents.

SOUTHERN SAMPLERS

BY CHRISTOPHER BELL

THIRTY YEARS AGO a fellow named Joe Green, who was the Italian spelling, Verdi, had a couple of children produced for the first time in this country. That was rare indeed, and the Academy of Music, New York, put them on the program for the first time in 1855; and now in America that boasts of an opera company that headline from one to three by Verdi each season.

Verdi and Il Trovatore, the two were heard here a hundred years ago, are still perhaps the most well-known and the most loved of all Verdi's operas. Together they almost always composed another opera, a fellow born to greatness, and the devil's own time.

settling there. In the first place, when still a baby he almost perished in the rape of La Roncole, the town where he was born. Fortunately, though, his mother saw that the church in which she, and a great many townspeople, had sought sanctuary was not going to be any sanctuary from the marauding soldiers, and she climbed with the baby in her arms to the very topmost landing in the bell tower. There she covered beneath the bells until the soldiers, surfeited with brutality, went away.

It was from her that Verdi inherited a great deal of his courage and resourcefulness. His father, a poor man, nevertheless encouraged Giuseppe in his musical career, although music then, as well as now, was hardly a money-making activity for his only son.

Perhaps Giuseppe's first awakening to music was at the age of five, when he was serving as an altar boy at the village church. It is told that he became so enthralled with the notes of the organ accompanying that Mass that he forgot everything else; and when the priest called for the holy water, Giuseppe paid no attention and stood staring at the organ loft, completely out of the world.

"Water!" hissed the priest. But Giuseppe heard nothing but the celestial music. "Water!" repeated the priest, but he might as well have been one crying in the wilderness, or desert, for all of Giuseppe.

Finally the priest, exasperated, reached out and gave Giuseppe a kick to get him started. The kick sent the boy tumbling off the altar steps and onto the floor, where his head hit with a resounding thump. Giuseppe faintly dead away; but when he came to he showed no anger or resentment—merely sat up, rubbing his head and listening again to the wonderful music that had never stopped.

I have often wondered if that blow had anything to do with the outbursts of rage that shook him in later years; though, of course, Verdi had enough frustration and outrageous flights from fate to throw anyone into an occasional fit of temper. And against this one personality defect he had always the outstanding qualities of integrity and industry. Always Giuseppe worked, and it was a good thing that in his much beset career he got on early start.

By twelve he was the official organist at La Roncole, playing himself now the same church organ that had sent him into such raptures seven years before. During this time Verdi was living in Busseto, about six miles from La Roncole, and working for a grocer named Brezzi, who was musically inclined himself and took a great interest in the hard-working boy.

Soon Brezzi, realizing Verdi's talent, urged the boy to go to Milan to study in the conservatory there. He managed to get a small fund, $120 a year, for the boy, adding a contribution of his own to that. So off set Verdi to the city, looking forward to wonderful years at the conservatory.

Unfortunately, the conservatory wouldn't accept him, saying he didn't show sufficient musical aptitude—an opinion the committee of selection lived to regret. Verdi stayed in Milan, though, studying under a private teacher, until he heard that the post as organist at Busseto was vacant.

He returned in the hope of getting that position; and it was while living again in Busseto that he married Margherita Baretti, daughter of the musical, and kind, groceryman.

After a couple of years of marriage, and the birth of his son, Verdi decided he'd better get back to Milan where he might possibly make more money to offset his increasing domestic expenses. Accordingly, he and his young wife and the baby set up housekeeping in a small apartment in Milan, and it was nearly ready for performance at La Scala.

This was the one that turned out to be a lukewarm success, pleasing no one, really, least of all Verdi. However, it did bring him a contract for three more, the first of the trio to be a comic opera, "molto buffo."

It would have been very funny indeed if Verdi could have written a funny opera according to schedule, for in the ensuing two years first his daughter, born after the move to Milan, then his son, and finally his wife, Margherita, died. All of this in the space of less than two years!

It nearly drove the young composer out of his mind. And on top of that, the manager of La Scala was writing for the already commissioned comic opera, molto buffo—very funny.

By an act of will Verdi completed the opera and it was put on in September of 1840. It failed. Completely and miserably. It was called "King for a Day." The cruel audience dubbed it "Flasco of a Night." Verdi never forgave the Milanese their jeers at this opera, written at such awful effort. It was then that he swore never to write another.

There followed a period of aching despair. Verdi lived in a sort of coma, going about the city unseeing. Sunk in dejection, he would sit for hours at a table of the cafe that he frequented, staring into space. Finally he got down to the point that he was forced to ask the cafe owner if he might have a few meals on credit. The owner refused.

It was then that Verdi, head down against the falling snow, shuffled from the cafe and along the slush covered streets of Milan. And it was then that he bumped blindly into Merelli, the manager of La Scala.

Merelli knew composers, and he believed in Verdi. He began talking to him, urging him to try again. Verdi shook his head in refusal. But Merelli maneuvered him along toward his office; and once there, he shoved into his pocket the libretto of another opera, urging him to go home and write the music for it. Verdi went home, but not to write the opera. Instead he threw it onto the kitchen table in disgust while he searched through the cupboard to see if there were anything there to make a supper of, the cafe owner having refused him this.

While turning back to the table, his glance fell on a page of the libretto, and one sentence, one line stood out in all its lasting loveliness: "Go, thought, on wings of gold."

And now, his hunger forgotten, Verdi sat at the table and wrote, freely and a flowing torrent of talent, the opera that was to take Milan by storm and forever keep the composer from want and despair.

Verdi lived a long time after his first success, following always the "thought on golden wings" that carried him onward through a life of beautiful music; culminating in his old age in the triumphant "Aida" and at last, as a crowning touch in humanity, a comic opera that was molto buffo indeed, one of the funniest operas in the world, "Falstaff"—CPB

VERDIAN TALKERS TO KEYNOTE MNC FORUM

Bertram Talmage, former governor of Georgia, was selected on invitation to deliver the keynote address at the statewide national affairs forum to be held in Jackson on November 10, under Economic Council.

Oscar O. Wolfe Jr., of Duncan, chairman of the Council's national affairs forum committee, said the colorful former governor will speak just prior to the forum, and then will sit in the panel.

Wolfe said other details of the forum will be announced later. Members of his committee

The forum on Mississippi's economic future will be the fifth such event sponsored by the MNC to bring about a better understanding of national affairs by citizens of the state. All former governors have attracted record crowds.

"We are confident Governor Talmage will give an interesting and informative keynote speech at the forum," Wolfe said. "He is known for his love for the South and its traditions, and is a staunch supporter of Southern ideals. He is also noted for his quick wit and humor. Mississippians will enjoy a real treat when they hear him."

"But the real stars of the forum of course are our own two senators and six congressmen, who have attended the forum year after year to give citizens a first-hand report on what takes place in Washington. They are to be commended for their fine cooperation in this effort."

Wolfe said other details of the forum will be announced later. Members of his committee

PLAQUE FOR EMPLOYER SAFETY RECORD AWARD

The management and employees of Coast Electric Power Association, having achieved the goal of 50,000 consecutive man-hours without a lost-time accident, are the recipients of the Rural Electric Cooperative Safety Award presented by the Safety Engineering Department of Employees Mutual Liability Insurance Company of Wisconsin.

Presentation of this award was made by Mr. Bill Moxey, Engineer of Employees Mutuals, at a steak dinner given by Coast Electric on Thursday evening, Aug. 18, in recognition of this achievement of the employees and honoring guests of the occasion.

Accepting the plaque on behalf of the Association, its management and employees were M. H. Shattuck, manager, and J. W. Watts Jr., operations superintendent.

Representing Employers Mutuals were E. E. Williamson, resident manager, Jackson; Carl Langhorst, assistant supervising engineer, Dallas, Tex.; Bill Moxey, who is a new engineer recently transferred to Jackson; and Gene Love, claim agent for this area.

Representing the REA was James Black, accompanied by Mrs. Black. E. H. Stovall safety engineer and instructor in safety and job training for the State of Mississippi, represented Mississippi State College. The Mississippi State Highway Patrol's representative was officer William (Bill) Kenny. George Curet, represented the Board of Directors of the Association; and almost in full attendance were the more than 40 employees of Coast Electric, including office, construction and maintenance personnel.

Representatives of the insurance company complimented both management and employees of the association for their excellent record and achievement. Expressions of praise also were voiced by Black, Stovall and Curet.

Officer Kenny was lavish in his praise of Coast Electric personnel for their cooperation with the State Highway Patrol, and their contribution toward keeping the highways safe. He called attention to the safety possibilities of the two-way radio communications system of both the association and the highway patrol through which arrangements for joint communications had been set up in a cooperative effort to take care of any emergency. He expressed appreciation for every courtesy shown the State Highway Patrol, and on behalf of the patrol offered fullest cooperation at all times in the interest of public safety.

Shattuck expressed appreciation for all tributes accorded Coast Electric personnel on this occasion and expressed great pride in the accomplishment achieved through the cooperation of all employees, together with the excellent instruction received through the safety and job training program.

"However, this is only the first hurdle," Shattuck declared. "Extra special awards for high or goals of man hour periods without a lost time accident are being offered by Employers Mutuals, and Coast Electric expects to make very effort to obtain these goals."

Both J. W. Watts Jr., operations superintendent, and Owen A. Jessup, office manager of Coast Electric, expressed their appreciation to their fellow employees and offered their full support in future work and further accomplishments.

The evening was one of full entertainment and delicious refreshments, capably handled by R. A. Scivique at his Star Route Farm. The occasion, marking a milestone in accomplishment, was highly enjoyable for those present and deeply gratifying to all who are a part of Coast Electric.
